A fascinating assessment of the ethics program at Lockheed Martin, one of the world's largest defense contractors.

"Innovative . . . a case study in blending praise and criticism."--Chronicle of Higher Education "[Terris writes engagingly . . . This well-organized analysis of the ethical behavior of one corporation provides an excellent case study. A valuable resource for business ethics courses."--Choice "[A timely book . . . Terris' analysis of the working of [Lockheed Martin's current program will be useful for those attempting to foil future unlawful business practices."--Barron's From the Publisher 6 x 9 trim. 0 About the Author DANIEL TERRIS is director of the International Center for Ethics, Justice and Public Life at Brandeis University.
